SCHOOL DAYS OF ENGLISH CROWN PRINCE DESCRIBED AS THAT OF AVERAGE YOUTH

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, July 18.—The prince of Wales, who has just completed two years at Oxford, is finding his exploits at that institution of learning under critical review in the newspapers. An undergraduate, who has had an opportunity to see much of this future king of England, notes his impressions in a seemingly frank manner.

"Viewed impartially," he says, "the prince's career has been neither better nor worse than that of the average titled undergraduate. He has embarked on many of the many sports of youth, and excelled in none. Perhaps the best comment on his good spirit and his lack of 'side' was the fact that he played consistently at association football with the Magdalen college second eleven."

"For a long time he was the despair of his querry, but as a concession to popular opinion, expressed and unexpressed, he has acquired some skill in the saddle, and with it some of the standing that falls only to hunting men at Oxford."

"That the prince should take an equal footing with all in undergraduate life was, of course, an innovation attended, as one might expect, by advantages and drawbacks. The curious interest with which he was pestered in his early weeks soon wore off, but the natural desire to be intimately associated with a prince as easy of access was harder to kill."

"Magdalen second eleven last season proved far more attractive to many men than the college senior team. Little or no concession has been made to his royalty. I saw him the other day waiting at the door of one of the leading doctors in Oxford. On the other hand, he has had freedom and ease which he will never again enjoy; he has mixed unostentatiously with people of all ranks; he has endured bravely and well the discomforts of camp life as a private; and he has been treated with a quiet, well-bred respect by every member of the university."

The prince has rather startled his university companions lately by taking to the pipe and giving up, for the moment, the cigarette. A picture of him with the Oxford officers' training corps shows the prince puffing at a great bull dog pipe, and apparently enjoying it. The next day, however, he left his regiment, which had not finished its training, and came to London. Gossips are saying that Queen Mary, having seen the picture, sent for him.
